

Abortion Access: Now the States Decide

In June, 2022, the Supreme Court of the United States overturned Roe v. Wade, a 50 year old ruling that enshrined the right to an abortion at the federal level. The new precedent, Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, turned the issue of abortion access back to the states. Several states had "trigger laws" that would ban abortion if Roe v. Wade was ever overturned. Others have since rolled back access. Several states have held referendums to protect abortion access in some capacity, including Republican-led states, such as Kansas. Several more states will vote on this issue in November, including Florida.

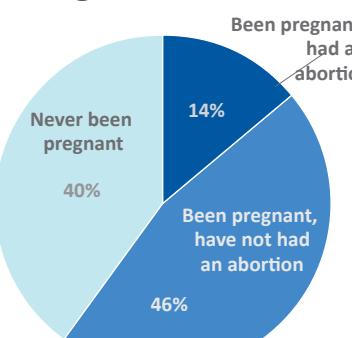

U.S WOMEN CONCERNED THEY WOULDN'T BE ABLE TO GET AN ABORTION

ABORTION CLINICS IN 2020 VS MARCH 2024

This chart tracks the decline in brick and mortar abortion clinics throughout the U.S. from 2020 to March 2024. Several states, including Texas, Tennessee, Indiana, Alabama, Oklahoma, Idaho, Louisiana, closed a multitude of clinics almost immediately, after steadily decreasing in the past decade.

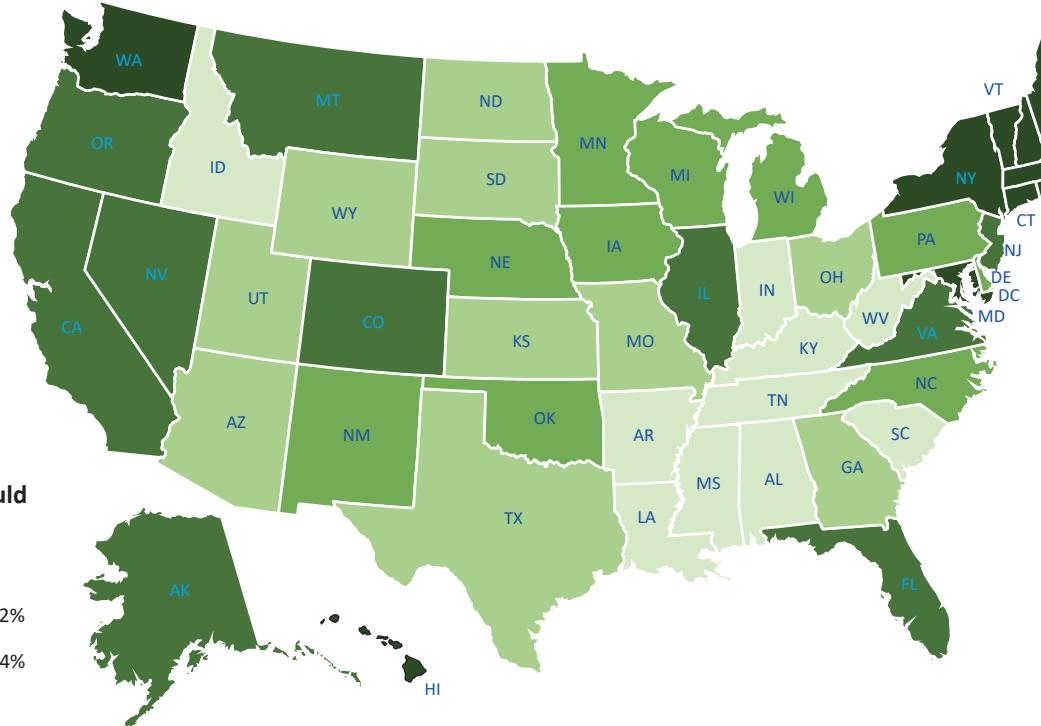

This chart excludes Florida, California, and New York which all far exceeded the scale. Florida decreased from 58 to 54 clinics. New York increased from 104 to 107 clinics, and California increased from 170 clinics to a staggering 180 clinics.

Texas was responsible for the largest decline in brick and mortar abortion clinics. Other states in the American South joined Texas, creating a desert of abortion access. In response, New Mexico opened clinics in an attempt to serve Texans seeking abortions.

VIEWS ABOUT ABORTION BY STATE

This chart splits the states into quintiles and indicates that close to half the country's states have a majority view supporting abortion.

Trump

- Policy has varied
- Would support a 15 week ban
- Believes it should be left to the states

Harris

- Has eased access to abortion medicine
- Believes in a federal protection of abortion

Florida Referendum

Floridians plan to vote on a ballot measure to prohibit the legislature from banning abortions before fetal viability and nullify the heartbeat act.
